Dear Friends,

In Just Times is taking August off - but the Law Center is hard at work! Just a few highlights:

Jeremy Rosen, our Advocacy Director, testified before a U.N. Committee in Geneva about the disproportionate racial impact of homelessness in the U.S. The U.S. is being reviewed for compliance with the Convention to Eliminate Racial Discrimination, and this is a critical issue. You can read the report we submitted to the Committee here and view photos here.

Our recent report, No Safe Place, has sparked tremendous national, local and even international media coverage. It's also generated a lot of interest from advocates: our follow up webinar attracted hundreds of participants, and our session on criminalization at the National Alliance to End Homelessness conference was packed. Stay tuned for our forthcoming advocacy manual on the topic.

And, as we plan this year’s McKinney-Vento Awards, we’re excited by the stellar group of leaders we'll be recognizing: The Baltimore Ravens’ wide receiver Steve Smith; U.S. Senator Patty Murray; Sidley Austin LLP; and Aleah Green. We'll also be celebrating the Law Center's 25th anniversary! You can find more details, including...
In Just Times will return in September.

Changing Laws. Changing Lives.

The National Law Center on Homelessness & Poverty is the only national organization providing high-level, comprehensive legal and legislative expertise resolving national homelessness issues through advocacy, advocacy training, public education, and impact litigation
